Reader, expect not from me such predictions, As I shall mention, true without restrictions; For, like my predecessors, I premise 'Twill hap as here set down, or otherwise. Behold, the shortened joyous wintry days, Frosty, roll on; and through the blue serene, For sight too sine, th' etherial nitre slies, Killing infectious damps, and the spent air Storing afresh with elemental life.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE.

A VERY valuable garden having caught the eye of a pretty farmer's wife, in Stadford-shire, England; she determined to secure to herself the use of it, without paying any rent; accordingly, whenever any tenant came to occupy the house which belonged to the premises, she appeared in the bed-room in the night, wrapped up in a white sheet, by which every person who came was affrighted from the place. At last a fine young fellow immediately entered into a conversation, and found it most charming shesh and blood—the visits continued, and in nine months the ghost was essentially laid—in the straw.

ANECDOTES.

A GENTLEMAN, not remarkable for his steadiness to a party, was complaining that he was troubled with a pain in his side; "Sir," said a friend, "when you find yourself uneasy on one side, you have nothing to do but to turn to the other."

WHEN Quin was one day lamenting that he grew old, a pert young fellow asked him what he would give to be as young as he was?—"I would even submit," said Quin, to be almost as foolish."

A recruiting Serjeant beating up in Birmingham some time since, said in his sine speech—" As a further encouragement for recruits to enter, you shall have

Six pence a day,
As long as you stay."
To which a shrewd by stander added,
"And a thousand lashes if you go away!!!"

THE KISS REPAID.

S ROGER with his MOLL was walking, Smiling full blith, and gaily talking; Sir John, an am'rous Knight, pass'd by, And chanc'd on MOLL to cast his eye; And with her native beauty pleas'd, The rustic husband thus address'd: Hail, honest friend! why odds my life! You've got a wond'rous pretty wife! If you'll permit me one small favour, To kiss her once, I mean, and leave her, When e'er you chance to meet my dame, You shall be welcome to the same. Quoth ROGER, if that's all you crave, Your worship freely has my leave. The Knight step'd up without delay, Kis'd her, and walk'd content away.

Some few days after this, in hafte As o'er the meadows Roger pass'd, His gentle friend Sir John he spy'd, My lady tripping by his fide; He bow'd, and tho' his mouth did water, Pass'd on, and mention'd not the matter. The Knight then fpying him, fays, friend, To promifes I always stand, See here my wife at your command. The clown approach'd and kiss'd the dame, Then fir'd with more than usual flame. He went and to himself thus said, Since the good Knight fo well has paid His promise, troth I had much rather, He'd gone with Morr a little farther.

A RECIPE FOR KILLING RATS.

AKE one quart of oat-meal, four drops of oil of Rhodium, one grain of mask, two nuts of nux vomica powdered. Mix the whole together, and place it where the rats frequent; continue to do lo while they eat it, and it will foon destroy them, be they ever fo numerous.

7HEN beauty blooms, and fortune fmiles, And wealth the easy breast beguiles, When pleafure from her downy wings, Her foft bewitching incense flings : Then friends look kind, and round the heart The melting flames of passion move, And flattery's foothing strains impart The warmest friendship-fondest love : But when capricious fortune flies, Then friendship fades, and pleasure dies. The prayer of a wife Heathen. The My day 1793 ye marster GREAT Jove, this one petition grant; (Thou knowest best what mortals want ; ) Ask'd or unask'd, what's good supply; What's evil—to our prayers deny! PLATO's Advice. CAYS Plato, Why should man be vain ! Since bounteous Heav'n has made him great, Why look with insolent disdain, On those undeck'd with wealth or state? Can costly robes, or beds of down, Or all the gems that deck the fair; Can all the glories of a crown Give health, or ease the brow of care? The scepter'd king, the burden'd flave, The humble and the haughty die; The rich, the poor, the base, the brave, In dust, without distinction lie. Go fearch the tombs where monarchs rest. Who once the greatest titles wore, Of wealth and glory they're bereft, And all their honors are no more. So flies the meteor through the skies, And spreads along a gilded train; When shot-'tis gone; its beauty dies, Diffolves to common air again. So 'tis with us, my jovial fouls-Let friendship reign, while here we flay; Let's crown our joy with flowing bowls; When Jove commands we must obey
